Kabardian in Saudi Arabia

The Kabardians have been nearly exterminated many times over. They were involved in the Russo-Circassian wars that ended in 1864, which destroyed 90 percent of their population. Every Kabardian marriage ceremony involves the "tree of life," which represents their remarkable survival in modern times and hope for the future. They believe that hospitality must be extended to even strangers and that honor for their family elders must be demonstrated. On the other hand, blood revenge is a deeply ingrained cultural value.

Ministry Obstacles

The Kabardians have a fierce loyalty to their Muslim religious system. They are resistant to "strangers" who have historically taken advantage of them and threatened their very existence.

Outreach Ideas

Caring believers can slowly develop loving relationships with Kabardians and find opportunities to share that Jesus loves them and has provided the way for them to be reconciled to our heavenly Father.

Prayer Focus

Pray for a Disciple Making Movement to take place with the Kabardians during the next ten years and for church planting
