Hani in Vietnam

How do you grow rice if you live in the mountains? The answer is to build terraces or flat plots of land along the slopes, which has been the practice of the Hani people of northern Vietnam for hundreds of years. In addition, raising cattle has been an increasing source of income for the Hani. They live in plaster and wooden houses in villages of 50 households. The Hani believe that spirits inhabit objects of nature and that these spirits must be appeased by prayers and offerings, or they may bring disaster.

Ministry Obstacles

The Hani have been animists, and they have venerated their ancestors for hundreds of years. Their trust is in spirits that are not submitted to the Lord. The Vietnamese government will not allow foreign missionaries to enter the Hani areas.

Outreach Ideas

The JESUS Film is available in the Hani language. Vietnamese believers can take this valuable gospel tool to the Hani.

SCRIPTURE But each day the Lord pours His unending love upon me, and through each night I sing His songs, praying to God who gives me life.
