Socotran in the UAE

The inhabitants of Socotra Island off the coast of Yemen differ from mainland Arabs and are believed to be a mixture of Greek, Portuguese, African and Arab. Their language is a version of the ancient Himyarite language, which was spoken in pre-Islamic Arabia for many centuries. Most live on this island but a small number work in the United Arab Emirates (UAE).

Ministry Obstacles

Though their beliefs are based mainly in Islam, until recent years they have been very low key about that. Influences from the mainland, which is more fundamental, have changed the way people practice their beliefs. Women wear the lithma or the black burka which they did not do some years ago. However, the women in isolated mountain villages are more relaxed and wear the typical bright colors.

Outreach Ideas

These gospel starved people are much more likely to be reached in the UAE than in their island home.
