Padharia in India

What good does it do to have public jobs and special consideration for university admissions if you have a low literacy rate? That is the situation for the Padharias, a Scheduled Tribe of Gujarat. They live as landless agricultural workers. Some fish and rent out their boats. The large majority of the Padharia profess to be Hindus. Their brand of Hinduism is influenced by traditional animism and a veneration for their ancestors. As a tribal group the Padharia are considered by higher castes to be Dalits, outside the Hindu system.

Ministry Obstacles

Since many of the Padharia are illiterate they are unable to read the Bible that is available in Gujarati, their primary language. The gospel will have to be presented to them in oral and visual forms.

Outreach Ideas

Believers can show the Gujarati JESUS Film. Medical teams of believers can bring the benefits of modern medicine to the Padharia.
